

Naccaman Williams, Ed.D.

Naccaman William is director of the Walton Family Foundation's Special Projects unit, which includes over-seeing large grants and managing other grant making organizations. Dr. Williams has been working in philanthropy for 33 years. A former junior and senior high school mathematics teacher, Dr. Williams has served in several higher education roles, including director of the P.K. Yonge Developmental Research School at the University of Florida, and assistant dean and director of minority education services in the College of Education at the University of Arkansas. He served seven years on the Arkansas State Board of Education, including two years as chairman. He also served a four-year term on the Southern Regional Education Board. Dr. Williams holds a bachelor's and master's degrees from Ouachita Baptist University and an Education Specialist degree and a doctorate in education administration from the University of Arkansas.

Dr. Williams is a deacon, trustee and teacher at the Historic St. James Missionary Baptist Church in Fayetteville.

He is a former infantry officer in the United States Army Reserve. A member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity incorporated.

His is married to Angela Williams and they have two sons

